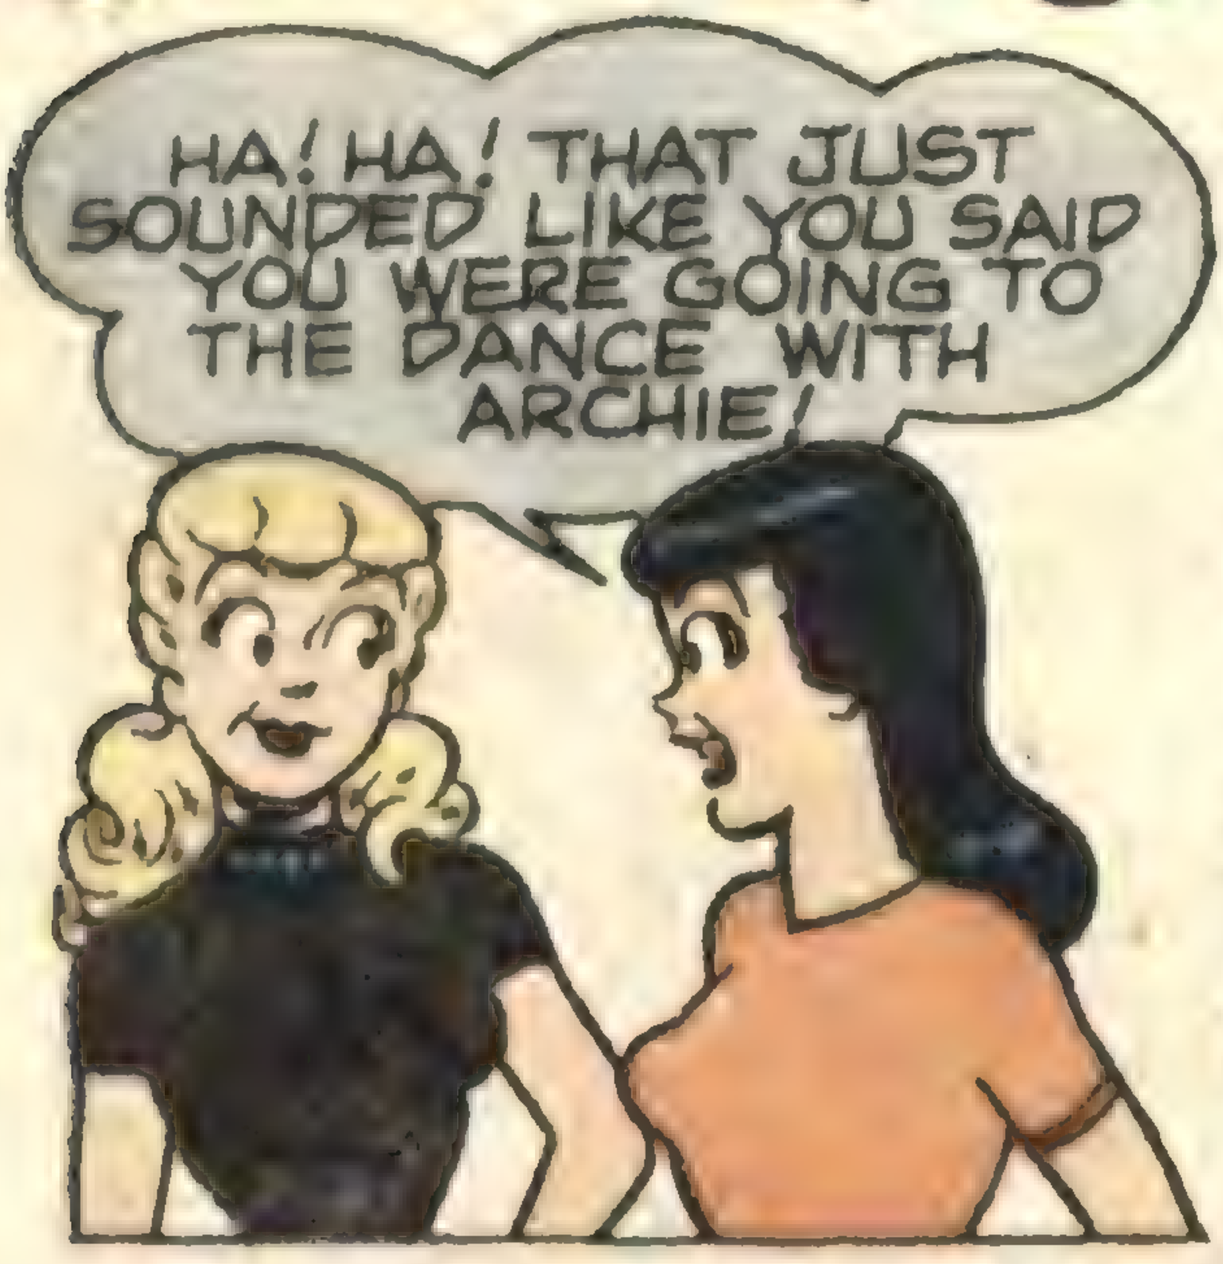
BETTY'S DIARY



Wednesday

Dear Diary:

Archie is odd! I mean, like last week, he's barely speaking to anyone, Veronica included. I found that out when she asked me why Archie was acting so dopey recently. This came as a jolt because I had supposed he was always dopey with Veronica. But now if he's dopey for another reason, I'm going to have twice as much trouble getting him to take me to the dance this Saturday! I buzzed home to the phone and made a fast chum check. Results: Nil! Nobody knows what it is with Archie. Diary, could it be another girl?

Thursday

Friend Diary:

Utter desolation. It is another girl. There's a new Pet and Hobby shop in town. The owner has a daughter. And oh, yes, Diary, she is the absolute end. And a redhead, too. I saw her in school and I guess Archie did, too . . . because today, as I was ambling by Harvey's Hobby Hall, I happened to notice Archie going in. An hour later, I saw Archie exit. He certainly did have that dopey look Ronnie was talking about. I'm crushed, it's bad enough to compete with Veronica, but an utterly new femme has me completely confused. The dance is only two days away. Diary, what is the answer?

Friday

Diary Dear:

Unable to stand the suspense! Archie is practically in another world. Looks right through me! I went shopping at Harvey's Hobby Hall expecting to meet up with the redhead. But her dad (Harvey) says she never goes into the shop because of the puppies and kittens for sale. It seems she's allergic to them. So how come Archie spent exactly one solid hour there? This is a puzzlement!

I roamed about, looking at lots of pets and possible hobbies. The most eye-catching display was a collection of lovely sea shells. Harvey waltzed over and said that lots of gals were buying shells and making their own jewelry. I ogled some especially handsome items with an eye to kind of calypso-ing up my outfit for the dance (Dep't. of wild hopes—still think Archie might take me). I grabbed up a beautiful batch of shells, including the last of a couple of rather special specimens, according to Harvey, and toddled along home, still mystified about Archie, but with my temporary hobby helping me take my mind off him.

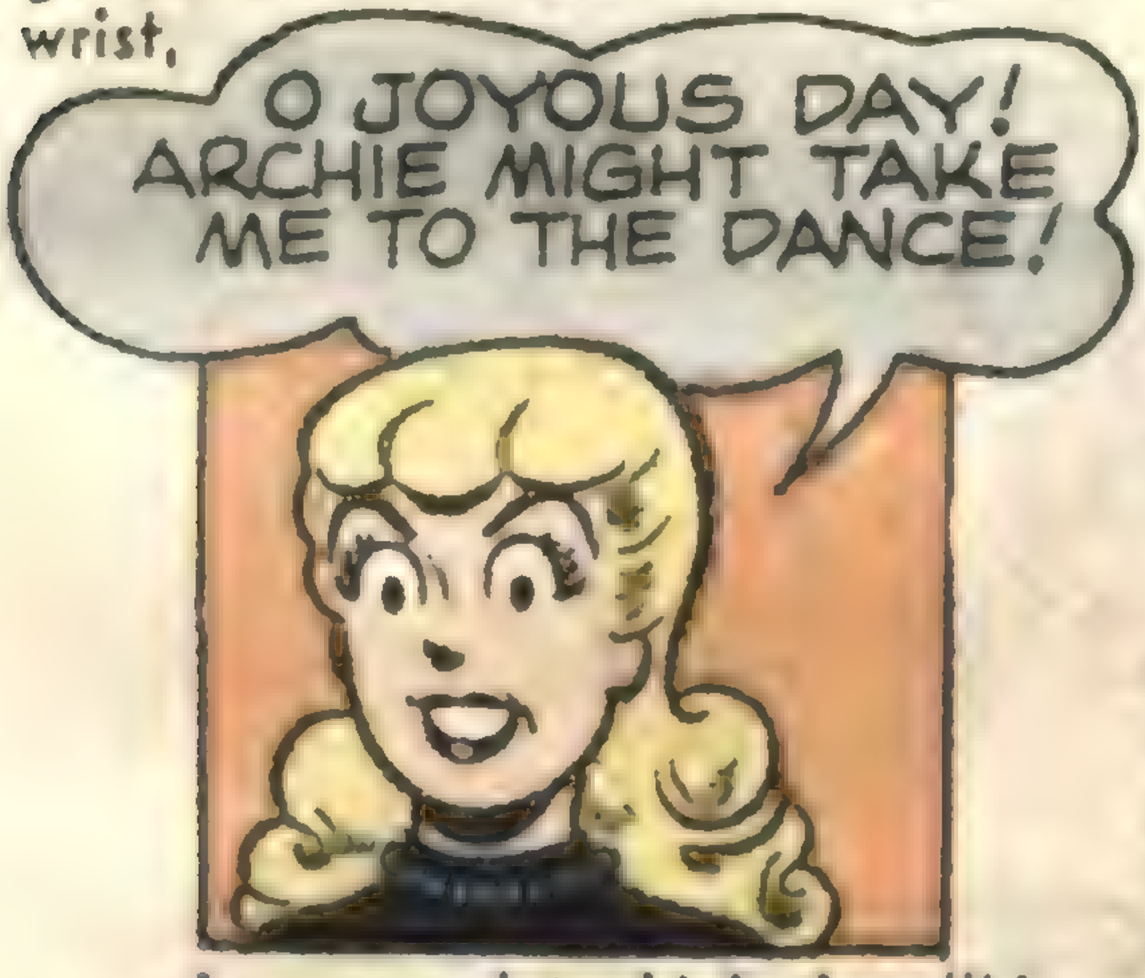
I had just completed the most delightful bracelet when the phone jangled. It was Archie. "Betty, I've gotta see you right away. Can I come over?" Of course, I tried to seem disinterested but it didn't go very well. Moments later, my gorgeous, new bracelet adorning my wrist,



I answered Archie's ring. "Listen, Betty, I understand you've got the West Indian Tegula!" Well, I just about went into shock. After all, I'd been feeling fine, and I thought I'd been looking rather well lately. "I have nothing of the kind, Archie Andrews," I shrieked, "I don't even have the sniffles." Then he grabbed my hand and I started to pucker up. But all he did was holler. "Wow! The Aul Miniature Cerith, both Univalves. Egad, girl, get with it! You're talking to the town's most avid Conchologist." I could go along with that avid bit, but he lost me after 'Conch!'

And when he took me in his arms and said, "Betty, you've got it, I mean them," my heart skipped a beat and I felt the dance moving closer. I smiled as sweetly as I could over my utter confusion and said, "Huh?"

Well, Diary, it turned out that I did have the West Indian Tegula, as well as the Aul Miniature Cerith, and no pain whatever. It also developed that Archie was preoccupied with a sea shell collection of monumental proportions and was anxious to add the last of the rather special specimens I was wearing in my bracelet. Diary—things are looking up!

Saturday

Dear Diary:

Of course it meant dismantling my handiwork, but after all, the big dance was really a dreamy affair. And who knows, I may become the first lady Conchologist in town. Anything for my Archiekins! Good night, Diary!
